Questions 26 – 30

Read the passage below and answer the questions that follow.

- 1 A few hours after the birth of her son in August 1965, Marian Burke's doctor stood by her bed and said, "Your son has Down Syndrome." The words cut through Marian and her husband, Frank like a knife. They could not imagine their son being retarded, probably never be able to read or even feed himself. The doctor advised them to institutionalize him but they were determined to care for their son. They took Christopher home. 5
- 2 Christopher's condition became more evident gradually as his speech was lured and garbled. He was two years old before he took his first wobbly steps. The learning ability of a Down Syndrome child can be raised by exercises and stimulation. The Burke family did just that from the very beginning. Christopher's sisters, Anne and Ellen, sat with him in front of a mirror and played a game to help him talk. They said words for him to repeat and soon he was able to say those words. His brother, J.R, worked on his coordination. He taught Christopher to swim and play basketball. 10
- 3 One afternoon when Chris was eight years old, he found a box of photographs taken of J.R, Ellen and Anne when they were child actors in television commercials. Haltingly, he announced, "I want to do that. I want to be on TV too". His parents couldn't bring themselves to tell him the truth. Chris never forgot his dream. Over and over, he practiced lip-syncing his favourite tunes and dancing whenever a teacher in his school put on a record. 15
- 4 Chris completed his special school education at the age of 21. His family helped him look for a regular job but to no avail. Both his sisters had their own families and they knew that Chris was a caring and loving person. At last Ellen managed to get Chris a volunteer's job at a school for children with severe disabilities. 20
- 5 But, in his heart, Chris was still set on going to Hollywood. His brother talked to him, hoping to make him aware of his impossible dream. Chris, however was not going to give up. When he was 19, he had seen a TV programme that featured a ten-year-old actor named Jason Kingsley who had Down Syndrome. Chris had written Jason to congratulate him. Jason's mother, Emily Kingsley, responded with a warm note. 25
- 30

6 When Emily was asked to recommend an actor with Down Syndrome for a TV movie, she remembered Chris. Jason was too young for the part but Chris might be perfect. Not long after, the casting director called the Burkes. Chris was overjoyed. The moment he had been waiting for came when he was asked to go to Los Angeles for his first audition. Frank accompanied his son. 35

7 A week later, Chris made another trip to Los Angeles, this time for the actual making of the movie. Chris was excited and happy to be there. The movie was broadcast in September 1987. Writer producer Michael Braverman decided to create series around Chris about a family with a son who has Down Syndrome. Plans for the prospective show took more than eight months to complete, after which Chris was called up to shoot the pilot series episode. 40

8 Chris was the central character in the series and there were doubts if he could handle the workload. However, Chris superb performance in the pilot episode where he recited Edgar Allan Poe's poem "The Raven" without any cue cards assured everyone of his capability. 45

9 The debut broadcast of the series "Life Goes On" on September 12, 1989, brought a chorus of acclaim and gratitude. One newspaper story quoted a young mother who said that since the show, people had been coming up to talk to her retarded son instead of shunning him. 50

10 Chris Burke has won countless moral victories for mentally handicapped people everywhere. One of his most moving pleas came at the end of the episode when he chose to speak for himself and all kids with Down Syndrome. "We have a life, we have dreams, just like you. All we want is a chance to be your friend."

11 Chris has achieved his two fondest dreams: he's a TV star and he's helping others with handicaps. 55

32. Read the extract of the poem "Monsoon History" by Shirley Geok-lin Lim below and answer the questions that follow.

Reading Tennyson, at six
p.m. in pajamas,
Listening to down-pouring
rain: the air ticks
With gnats, black spiders fly,
Moth sweep out of our rooms
Where termites built
Their hills of eggs and queens zoom
In heat. We wash our feet
For bed, watch mother uncoil
Her snake hair, unbuckle
The silver mesh around her waist,
Waiting for father pacing
The sand as fishers pull
From the straits after monsoon.

The air is still, silent
Like sleepers rocked in the pantun,
Sheltered by Malacca.
This was forty years ago, when nyonya married baba.
